TUESDAY AFTERNOON, APRIL 29.

THE DEATH PENALTY.-We a few days ago made some brief remarks upon this subject, and said of ministers of the gospel that "the maturer developments of truth in morals and religion receive from them, in general, the most tardy support; and especially when the · melioration of the vengeance of the law is proposed." We fear that in this we were understood as saying more than we intended. That ministers are exceedingly conservative in their views, that they are firmly established in their religious and moral convictions, that they are averse to novel interpretations of the Sacred Scriptures, are all that we designed to be understood as affirming. A result of these things is, that they are often tardy in giving their assent to changes which, though at first appearing incompatible with the divine authority, are in the end shown to be in strict accordance with that sanction and with the most enlightened humanity.

We have received a communication on this subject that we deem it prudent to withhold. not because we believe the writer designs to do

JENNY LIND was insulted at Pittsburg by some wicked boys, who threw pebbles into her dressing-room, and into her carriage as she rode home. On this account, it is said, she departed without giving a second concert. This is all to be regretted. She deserves better of our people, and has never elsewhere experienced the slightest indication of unkindness or want of the greatest courtesy and respect. It will perhaps be remarked before long that she is too easily offended at a whole city. This may be true; for she is only a woman, though, we cannot but think, one of the best of her sex. But this is not the principal subject of inquiry. The boys in Pittsburg have disgraced their city and the country, and they who administer the laws has been shown. It is entirely unworthy even the idle and wicked boys of an American city, in whose earliest lessons are ever inculcated respect for woman, and especially when charity, gentleness, and goodness are her adornments. This is a novel phase in American rowdyism. We have seen a foreign actor hissed and pelted from an American stage, while his wife was received with applause, though they were equally guilty of the indiscretion in talking present a beautiful appearance. aloud the sentiments of prejudice that many of persecuting resentment, but never before have penters. we known it to be manifested toward a woman

We on Saturday last announced that his excellency, ALEXANDER RAMSAY, Governor of the Territory of Minnesota, had arrived in this city on Friday from St. Paul, the capital of that Territory. OFFICIAL CHANGES .- The following were yesterday's rumors: Judge Williams, Democrat, of Michigan, has been dismissed from the Land Office, and Mr. Nourse, of Washington, appointed in his place. Lucas, a Whig editor of Illinois, and Mr. Whitney, (a son of Mr. Reuben N. Whitney,) have been dismissed. Stanley, of N. C., has also received notice of dismissal. Vedder of Illinois, Harris of Pa., and Randall of Md., all Democrats, have had their salaries raised $100 each. Thompson, of Alabama, Whig, has had his salary reduced $100.

daughter of Mr. and Mrs. White, who were Mexico, in the fall of 1849, is still living; and loving dame. that, with the negro servant girl, taken at the same time, she is now held in captivity by some of the Indians of that territory. We learn, also, that hopes are yet entertained that the measures adopted by the ex-officio Superintendher friends and relatives.

SUDDEN AND MELANCHOLY DEATH.-We learn that Mr. John C. MULLAY, of Pennsylvania, a clerk in the Indian Bureau, was, at eleven o'clock this morning, taken with an apoplectic or epileptic attack, and notwithstanding the presence and utmost endeavors of several eminent medical gentlemen, he died within an hour. His wife was promptly summoned, and was by his side when he expired.

Mr. M. was about forty-four or forty-five

There is a singular coincidence of events worthy of mention in connexion with this melancholy event. About twenty years ago, Major Morris, an accomplished officer of the United States army, entered the part of the War Department in which the present death occurred, and appeared to be in robust health; but, after shaking hands with the gentlemen present, was immediately taken as was Mr. Mullay to-day, and expired almost instantly.

Subsequently, the lamented Wirt was, in the same place, overcome by a similar attack, which was very near being fatal in its effects.

There is no doubt nothing more in all this than the accidental coincidence of the place, yet the mind cannot but dwell upon it.

Finding, however, that the men had left him, he attempted to follow and have them apprehended; but they were watching him also, and soon turned upon him again, when he took the more prudent course and fled. We record these things with regret and shame.

> NINTH STREET .- The improvement of the lot on which the Fourth Presbyterian church stands is nearly completed. A brick wall has been put up on each side and in the rear of the church, and is to be finished in front by an iron fence of beautiful pattern. The inside is to be sodded, or sown with grass, and planted with trees. It was contemplated to erect a receiving vault within the enclosure; but objection being made, the design was promptly and cheerfully abandoned.

More New Houses .- Mr. Thomas Lewis has there should conquer and subdue the spirit that nearly completed three very handsome brick dwelling-houses for himself, at the corner of 9th and I streets. The carpenters' work was done by Messrs. Barker and Harkness.

On 6th street, between H and I, four brick houses are being finished. They are owned by Mr. J. B. Phillips. The mason-work by Mr. W. G. Williams, the carpentering by Mr. Thos. Anderson, and the painting by Mr. R. Jones. The fronts are cast in imitation of marble, and

In Liquon.-Mrs. Sullivan is the name of a lady who has of late kept a comfortable and social little groggery, at the corner of Sixth street and Massachusetts avenue. She and Mrs. Mary Ann Brown were in the quiet enjoyment of a social glass yesterday afternoon, when that old French scissors-grinder, Mr. Cabbot, made a call. This gentleman was thirsty, although he had already imbibed very freely, and was willing to pay his two cents for a glass of the delectable beverage; but it appeared that the two ladies had also been drinking liberally, and somehow or other a triangular quarrel arose in the party, which soon turned into s fight of very many angles. We are not informed respecting all the particulars of this engagement, and only know the damage done by the quantity of blood that flowed; and to tell THE CHILD OF MRS. BOSTON, April 28. The schooner Mary Chilton, from Port au Prince on the 9th, arrived to-day. Capt. Hol-kins reports that the Chamber of Deputies had been in session to consider the proposition of the American Government relative to acknowledging the independence of the Dominicans. It was generally believed, the day the Chilton sailed, that the Chamber had rejected the proposition, and also rejected a claim made for th tention of the American brig Leander, and the imprisonment of her captain. In consequence of this the Haytiens were in daily expectation of the arrival of the American squadron. Five of the conspirators against the emperor had been shot. One of them was a custom-house officer, who died with the declaration that ther were plenty more left behind, who coincided with him in the opinion that the imperial government was too expensive for so small an em pire. SYMMES, THE FUGITIVE .- It should be understood that this individual was far superior in intelligence to the slaves of the South generally, and that in consequence of this fact, together with the supposition that he had a free family in Georgia-which proves not to be the casemuch more sympathy was felt for him here than would otherwise have been the case.

He could read printed matter quite well, and during his confinement in the court-house, out of trial hours, he read the newspapers regularly, and smoked his cigar with as much grace previous to betaking himself to cards or other amusements, with which he whiled away the time with the officers.

Learning that he could not write, one of the officers, a good penmen, interested himself to educate him in that respect; and in the comparatively short time which elapsed. # SUNDAY.

We are commanded to remember the Sabbath day and to keep it holy. The citizens of Washington are generally reported to be a strict church-going people, and, as far as rests on the civil portion of them, they are, in fact, great respecters of this day. But we are sorry to state, that on Sunday last the appearance of that day, to strangers, would have been somethat day, to strangers, would have what contradictory. From the middle of the day, during the whole afternoon, groups of young men were seen drunk, staggering along the wide Avenue, and after night we noticed a gang on the north side of Pennsylvania avenue, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets Their yells and shrieks were so offensive and alarming, that families returning from church were obliged to cross, and turn off in different directions, in order to avoid insult. We heard numerous threats, as we passed them, to spill the blood of some person or persons whom they appeared to be excited about. Efforts were made to break down the iron gas lamp-posts, and from thence they passed down the Avenue in the most disorderly manner. Whether this was the same case in other parts of the city, we are unable to say, but we felt astonished that not a single police officer or watchman was to be seen or heard of. As open violation of law appears to be tolerated with impunity, we need not wonder at the destructive fire that near Seventh street on Sunday night; and, i tolerated much longer, we would ask what security has either life or property when at the disposal of a crowd of drunken boys? We hope the time may not be distant when such laws may be set forth, to arrest, and to hold to an account, any person that may be seen drunk upon the streets; for it certainly should be regarded only as an outrage upon a civil community. ALERT.
